

Project Route Decision

I chose waterfall as I thought it would be the best route to take. The app I designed and built had all the requirements and specification outlined at the beginning.

This made it easier to estimate the project flow and timescales to design and build it.

There was no need to alter any parts of the app in the process of carrying the steps out, so no need to have anything changed during build.